Current Comment

The Coming Election
From the Calgary News-Telegraph:
The election of Parliament will have been dropped, and we are likely to have a general election. It is, however, too early to make predictions. Either this is going to be a wide-open election, with half-dressed parties, and the result uncertain, or it is going to be a sort of "frame-up" between the Conservative party and the conscriptionist Liberals. In the latter case the cards are likely to be stacked against them. The people of Canada will have little or no scope to express their real sentiments. But with a sudden ending of the war—this might come—there would be a "Remedy for Depression." Also a ten-minute talk to the children. Strangers are cordially invited.

Winning the War in Ottawa
From the Ottawa Citizen:
From the Ottawa Citizen:
It is a good thing for the Militia Department to put a stop to "joy riding" in their motor cars. Every second car in the afternoon and evening is being used for "joy riding" outside the department. The officers of that department walked, now they ride, so do their friends. Why should the country's money be used for this unnecessary and expensive use of motor cars? When the cry is "more money and more men." One can see these cars and men standing all day—when not "joy riding" outside the department, waiting to take officials and stenographers to their homes, clubs and even out as far as the Country and Golf clubs, all at the expense of the country.—FIRST "WIN THE WAR."

Disfranchising Aliens
From the Ottawa Citizen:
In referring to the proposal to disfranchise voters of alien birth in this country, Mr. Meighen, solicitor general, declared that the alien voters, probably disloyal at heart, would vote against the government because, inferentially, the government was the enemy. This flagrant appeal to prejudice was inclined to pander to the enemy. This flagrant appeal to prejudice was inclined to pander to the enemy. This flagrant appeal to prejudice was inclined to pander to the enemy.

Conscription and Farm Help
From the Canadian Farm, Toronto:
Conscription will be the law of the land in a few days. What effect it will have upon labor on the farm will depend upon how the law will be administered. There can be no doubt that it will be administered with wisdom and that it will be the production of necessities. Increased production from the land is a necessity, whether it be of grain crops or meat and other products. Production from the land cannot be carried on without labor. For several years the farmer has not had sufficient help to supply his needs. Since the war the supply has been greatly lessened. The situation in this respect became so acute during the past twelve months that people in towns and cities realized that something must be done to get more help on the land. We do not know what the Government has in mind regarding the farm help situation. It would, however, create a most disastrous situation if the enforcement of conscription made it possible to obtain sufficient help to take care of this year's harvest, now that the farmer has done his part to make it as large as possible. This year's harvest must be taken care of, no matter what comes. As to the future we would commend the needs of the farmer, as regards help, to the careful consideration of those who will have the enforcement of the Conscription Act in their care. The man who serves on the land is rendering a valuable aid to the Empire and to the cause of the Allies at this juncture.

STAFF SHAKE-UP TAKES PLACE IN RUSSIAN ARMY

Korniloff's Old Army Has Counter-Attacked in Good Style.

RETIREMENT CONTINUES

Petrograd, Aug. 3.—Kimpolung, in southern Bukovina, has been evacuated by the Russians, the war office announced today. The Russian forces in southern Bukovina, the official announcement says, after a battle with the Austro-Germans, retired across the river Zbrova at its confluence with the river Dniester. The Russians are now engaged with the Austro-German forces on the river Hykista. Between the Dniester and the Pruth the Russian retirement is continuing.

Vienna, Aug. 3, via Amsterdam.—Austro-Hungarian troops have entered Cernowitza, the capital of the crown land of Bukovina. Cernowitza has been the scene of some of the most bitter fighting of the war and the Bukovina capital has changed from Teuton to Russian hands altogether ten times.

The appointment of General Korniloff as commander in chief because of his recognized courage and ability is applauded in military circles. General Korniloff, who has become extremely pessimistic towards the military situation, was nevertheless urged by Premier Kerensky to withhold his resignation at least until improved conditions had been achieved without avail. General Korniloff's appointment was then approved by the premier.

A special conference of the ministers held for the purpose of arranging matters regarding the constituent assembly has disappointed giving the franchise to the Romanoffs. General Radko Dimitrieff, commander of the Russian troops on the Riga front, has resigned his command of the Twelfth army. General Parsky will succeed him.

General Yassikowski, the Cosack officer, has been appointed to command the troops in Petrograd in place of General Polovstev, who recently resigned as military governor and has been given a command at the front.

WAR BILL WITHDRAWN

To a Canadian Aviator

Tossed like a falcon from the hunter's swooping plunge, a sudden shattering noise, And thou hast dived with a long spiral into the sea.

Thy peevish heart; gathering wing and poise, Thy plane transfigured and thy motor-churn Subdued to a murmur—then a silence And thou art but a disembodied venture in the void.

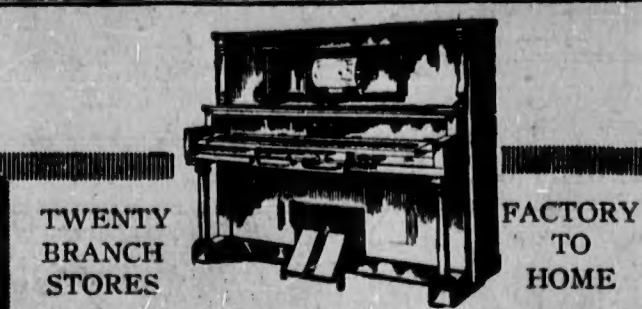

Still matches when his work is to be done, Met thee between the armies and the sky; Thy speck of shadow faltered in the sky; Then thy dead engine and thy broken wings Drooped through the arc and passed in fire— A wreath of smoke, a breathless exhalation But ere thou came a vision sealed thine eyes, Lulling thy senses with oblivion; And from his sliding station in the sky Thy dauntless soul upward in circles soared To the sublime and purest radiance whence it sprang.

In all their eyelids eagles shall mourn thy fate, And leaving on the lonely crags and scars Their unprotected young, shall congregate High in the tenuous heaven and answer screams, and with a wild audacity Dare all the battle danger of thy fate.

Till weary with combat one shall desert the light, Fall like a bolt of thunder and check the sun On the high ledge, smoky with mist and cloud, Where his neglected eaglets shriek aloud. And drawing the film across his sovereign sight, Shall dream of thy swift soul immortal Mounting in circles, faithful beyond death.

Today We Celebrate

First Meetings of Commons.

The Commons of England were called to sit in parliament for the first time in 1265, a little over 650 years ago, and fifty years after King John was forced by the barons to sign the Magna Charta. The man responsible for this popular representation was Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, who was killed in the battle of Evesham on Aug. 4, 1265, only a few months after he had gained an important place in history as the father of the English house of commons. Under his leadership the barons waged a successful war on King Henry, and after his death Edward I, his son, afterward Edward I, put down the law that the king derived his power from the people and made it for the public good, government for a time in the name of the king and issued the ordinance in 1265, which each city and town in the kingdom was to take up to "choose or send two discreet, loyal and honest men" to represent them in parliament. Thus was laid the foundation of the house of commons.

The Cost of The War

Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars a Minute for Great Britain.

The war is costing Great Britain over $25,000 a minute. What is costing you? Are you giving up savings to the nation? Canada is paying hundreds of millions annually to maintain its divisions in the first line, to give Britain the munition credits it desires, to insure the conduct of the war in a manner worthy of the Dominion. Are you helping? The country needs every dollar you can spare. It can't pay for the war. The government is urging you to exert every possible economy. The national Service Board is urging investment in War Savings Certificates. Have you invested in them? Are you indulging in luxuries? Are you eating peace meals or war meals? Are you taking every possible measure for the utilization and prevention of waste? Have you cut your expenditures to the minimum? If you cannot answer in the affirmative to the questions, you are not doing your utmost to win the war and only to utmost will suffice. Save your money in War Savings Certificates and help to win victory. A-1.

British aviators in Gievcliff and Demirhisar, and French aviators north of Monastir and north of Koritza, bombarded enemy installations and works."

The toast by the students of the summer school was responded to by Dr. J. C. Miller, director. J. T. Ross, associate director, Dr. E. W. Conn, who spoke on behalf of the staff, and J. T. Cuyler, president of the students' union. The next toast was "To the University," which was proposed by Dr. E. W. Conn, and responded to by Prof. Broadie, Dean Howe and Otwell. The toast of "The ladies" was proposed by Inspector J. E. Hodgson and responded to by Miss Jessie Ross.

A hearty and well deserved vote of thanks was accorded to Miss Russell, dietitian of the dining hall, whose hospitality and assiduity throughout the season was highly eulogized by J. T. Ross.

At the conclusion of the banquet, the guests spent some time in viewing the exhibits of work executed by the students during the season and which included specimens of wood work and board modelling, domestic science, cookery, art work, sewing and natural science.

The night's amusement was brought to a close by a dance, which was immensely enjoyed.

POLICE ARE ASKED TO FIND HUSBANDWife of James Stronach, Who Sought Land Here, Shows Anxiety.

James Stronach, of Geyser, Mont., came to Edmonton in July to buy land. He was seen in this city on the 10th of last month but has since disappeared without leaving a letter to the local detective department asking that a search be instituted for her husband.

The missing man is six feet tall, has dark hair and mustache and when last seen was wearing a black suit and hat. He was seen in the city on the 10th of last month but has since disappeared without leaving a letter to the local detective department asking that a search be instituted for her husband.

It is believed by the city detectives who are engaged in a search for the missing man that he may have been the subject of violence as he was understood to have a large sum of money in his possession.

vention, Winnipeg, Man.,

The Edmonton section will leave the city at 7:30 a.m. Sunday; the Calgary section leaves at city midnight Saturday, consolidating with the Edmonton section at Tofoed; running from there through to Winnipeg, arriving in that city before noon on Monday. Breakfast will be served on train.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE INCREASED VOTES SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT;
SIXTEEN LOSE THEIR DEPOSITSBiggest Majority Was Secured By W. A. Rae in Deferred Election—S. J. Tobin, Ledue, and George P. Smith, Camrose, Are Second and Third—Dr. Blow, Calgary, Had Only Large Majority Among Conservative Candidates.

Complete returns as a result of the recent provincial elections in Alberta have been compiled and show approximately a seventy-five per cent. increase in the total vote as a result of women's franchise going into operation for the first time.

The biggest majority of the province was secured by William A. Rae in the deferred election at Peace River. He polled a lead of 1,282 over his Conservative opponent D. H. Minchin, and nearly 300 more over the independent candidate.

In the contests at the general elections the biggest majority goes to S. J. Tobin, Liberal, of Leduc, with 1,107, while George P. Smith, Liberal, of Camrose, comes second with 1,064.

The only large Conservative majority was in Calgary South, where Dr. Blow had 1,026 over his leading opponent. There was no Liberal candidate for this seat.

Sixteen candidates, all Conservatives and Independents, lost their deposits as follows:

Proudfoot, Acadia; McNeil, Calgary; Clarke and Keelling, Edmonton; McIntosh and Reid, Edmonton; Leedy, Gleichen; Currie, Leduc; Thomas, Little Bow; Minchin and Adair, Peace River; Paton, Red Deer; Nickleson, Sturgeon; Angus, Wetaskiwin.

The provincial funds are thus enriched $1,600.

A notable feature was that only one seat showed a smaller vote than in 1915 despite the entrance of women into the field. That was Little Bow. The explanation is that the opposition candidate was not taken seriously and the people did not turn out.

The complete results are as follows:

CYCLISTS DISCUSS PROPOSED BYLAWCommittee Appointed To Take Up The Matter With The Council.

A fairly well attended meeting of local cyclists was held in the civic chamber of the city hall last night to consider the new cycling bylaw now before the council. The meeting was called by the delegation of cyclists that met the council last Tuesday evening with reference to the bylaw. H. P. Brown was in the chair and Mr. Bradley acted as secretary.

The proposed bylaw was discussed at considerable length and it was finally left to a committee of five to take it up with the safety and health committee of the council, which now has the matter in hand. Several changes will be recommended and more information with regard to some of the provisions of the bylaw are sought.

The meeting decided to consider the formation of a permanent cyclist organization in the city, and it was unanimously decided to form such a body. A committee of seven, with Rev. C. Kim as convener, was appointed to prepare a constitution and regulations and to call a further meeting and pass upon its report. It was pointed out that a cyclist's organization could be of use in a great many ways, particularly in working in with the patriotic bodies.

REPLACE WOODEN SIDEWALKS WITH CINDER PATHWAYSMaintenance Of Obsolete Sidewalks Found To Be Just As Expensive.

The bad state of many obsolete sidewalks in the city which have outlived both their debenture period and their usefulness, has been a serious matter for consideration, especially as the city has no real money to replace them with new wooden or concrete walks.

The commissioners have now definitely decided that they will take up the worst of the walks and replace them with cinder paths. The maintenance of the obsolete walks costs 15 to 17 cents per foot, and to put down cinder walks costs 15 cents, and the cinder walks are easily maintained and kept in order.

The sidewalk on the Strathcona road, which is in bad shape, is to receive immediate attention.

ENOUGH TWINE HERE
TO MEET DEMANDSShortage in Regina District Will Not Apply Among Edmonton Dealers.

Though a surplus of twine in Southern Saskatchewan is reported from Regina, yet after a survey of conditions at Edmonton as reported by local implement dealers the supply and demand will be about equal in this part of Alberta.

The dry weather in Saskatchewan is the cause of the decreased demand there, but round about Edmonton there has been, considering the recent local showers, a satisfactory supply of moisture and the growth of grain and greenfeed will be about equal with that of former years.

Some of the implement dealers report that unless the season is extraordinarily short, that some of the fields seeded for green feed will ripen and be harvested for good grain.

The price of twine this year is about six cents per pound higher than last year. Many local farmers have already placed their twine orders and to some the twine has been delivered.

SPEED UP HEARINGS
OF SPEEDING CASESMagistrate Barclay Will Wipe Off Slate All Ancient Charges.

That speeding motorists will have to be summoned to court shortly after the commission of an offense, or the charges will be wiped off the slate, was the ruling of the police department Friday morning by Magistrate Barclay. The case which caused the pronouncement by the magistrate was that of E. E. Brewer, coal dealer who was arraigned in court on a charge of having driven his car at an excessive rate of speed on July 12. The accused was found guilty and fined $2 and costs.

MISSES WILSON IMPROVING

The many friends of Miss Leatia and Vera Wilson will be glad to know that they are on the road to recovery. On the night of the accident, the Misses Wilson were first taken to the home of their cousin, Miss Hazel Lowe, and afterward conveyed to the general hospital by the order of Doctor Bralshaw.

Miss Leatia Wilson seems to have got the worst of it. She says it was a miracle that she escaped death and it was only by drawing her knees to her chin that she saved her life from being crushed out of her. She was one of the last that was pulled out of the wreck, so buried up was she that it was impossible to find her for some time.

POST OFFICE CLOSED MONDAY

Monday next, August 6th, being a holiday, the post office will be closed except the general delivery and the register wickets, which will be open from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. Letter carriers will make one delivery in the morning.

FINED $30 FOR SELLING FISH
UNFIT FOR FOODSouth Side Woman Brings Her
Marketing Troubles Before Magistrate Barclay.

"You're crazy, lady, that fish was caught fresh this morning."

This was the remark that resulted in the downfall of Albert Michaud, fish peddler. An enraged woman customer on the south side immediately took her marketing troubles to the police with the result that Albert was convicted by Magistrate Barclay Friday morning of a breach of the Public Health Act.

Michaud attempted to explain away the fact that he sold food unfit for consumption by stating that he had contracted with a cold storage company for the purchase of 2,000 pounds of fish and that it was not really his fault if some of it was bad.

Crown Prosecutor Heffernan and the magistrate took a serious view of the offense. Mr. Heffernan emphasized the point that the accused had used insulting language to his customer when she had asked him to take back his wares and return her money.

The magistrate insisted when fining Michaud $30 and costs that the public not be protected. Penalties were inflicted to be careless and take for granted the purity of eatables they purchased, he said.

Michaud lives at 10665 96th street and the woman who started the prosecution, Mrs. M. Driezen, lives at 11915 51st avenue.

RESERVE MILITIA
AMBULANCE CORPSGreater Interest In Drills—Have Decided To Continue Work
During August.

Increased interest was displayed in the work of the R. M. Ambulance Corps on Wednesday evening, by a large attendance at drill, which was efficiently conducted by Sergeant S. C. H. Turner.

The question of harvest leave was discussed and the men decided by a majority to stay with the work till the end of August on the understanding that arrangements will be made to suspend drills during September. As the first of the men to complete a first aid course to commence in October, men wishing to take up ambulance and first aid instruction, would do well to enrol with the R. M. Ambulance Corps any Wednesday evening in August, at city market building, 101st street. Drills take place on the open ground and commence at 8 o'clock every Wednesday evening. It is hoped all members will attend for the August drills and bring other men interested.

SIDEWALK ON 92ND STREET

If the penitentiary authorities will build a sidewalk along the east side of 92nd street from the north limit of the C. N. R. tracks to the north side of 167th avenue, the city has offered to build a crossing on 92nd street and connect the new walk with the walk on the west side of the street. The penitentiary officials say that they are willing to do this provided that the city induce the C. N. R. and the G. T. P. to continue the walk across their properties on the east side of 92nd street, continuing the two walks built by the penitentiary. Commissioner Harrison will now go into the matter, and endeavor to have the railway companies build the walk as desired.

WALLET PICKED UP

A small wallet has been picked up in the Civic block and a coupon for the North-West Commercial Travelers' association of Canada, made out in the name of A. E. McDonald, of Winnipeg. The wallet is now in the hands of Secretary B. L. Sh. of the commissioner's department.

SOUTH SIDE MART
BEING BOYCOTTEDPeople Sell Their Produce On Private Property—A Complaint.

Market Superintendent Robertson complains to the Commissioners that the city market on the south side is being boycotted.

Recently forty producers with their teams drove in the city and stood in private property, selling their goods, and he urges that a bylaw should be introduced making it illegal to hawk produce for sale away at the city market.

Commissioners, however, refuse to take any action in the matter.

The market superintendent stated that the south side aldermen were in favor of the bylaw.

Mrs. Henry Fawcett, Noted Englishwoman, Still Active at 70

The recent celebration of the seventieth anniversary of Mrs. Henry Fawcett, one of England's greatest women, brought forth many tributes. She is a younger sister of Dr. Elizabeth Garrett Anderson, the first woman physician in England and the first woman to be elected mayor of a town. Henry Fawcett, who had lost his sight in an accident, found in his wife a devoted helper. She was only twenty years old when she married, but she entered into her husband's literary work and his political activities with intelligent and wholehearted interest. When her husband was made Postmaster General, Mrs. Fawcett's assistance was of great value not only to him but to the nation. It was during his term that the parcels post was introduced in England, and various schemes were devised to encourage thrift among the people. Mrs. Fawcett has published several works over her own name, besides essays and lectures jointly with her husband. Among her books are Tales in Political Economy, A Life of Queen Victoria, Five Famous French Women, and others. Almost half a century ago she was instrumental in starting a movement for extending lectures in Cambridge University to women, and it was from this Newnham College grew. It is, however, for her work in political freedom for women's political freedom that Mrs. Fawcett is most widely known.

FINAL DAY OF THE RED CROSS DRIVE

One hundred and twenty workers sewed, finished and packed a fine lot of work on Friday. Everyone was tired but very well satisfied with the result of the week's effort. The total amount for the week is 188 pair pyjamas; 36 dozen straight bandages, 47 dozen handkerchiefs, 28 1/2 dozen T handkerchiefs, 21 1/2 dozen many-tailed bandages, 30 dozen triangular bandages, 20 dozen pillow cases. Tea was served in the afternoon and a nice sum netted which it is hoped when counted will cover the expenses which naturally accrue on an occasion of this kind.

The Daily Poem

THE MASTER'S CALL.

He called me first, in the early morn,
As I stood by the smiling sea,
But I heeded not, for the day, new-born,
Was a day that was all for me.

So I builded my castles, and dreamed my dreams,
And wondered why they should fall;
Till night drew near, and the sunset gleams
Brought back the thought of His call.

He called again, one busy noon,
But my plans loomed large that day;
I set all well, and forgot, so soon,
That the Master had come my way.

But the winds were fierce that day, ah me!
And I struggled alone thro' the storm;
Through the shadows, returning, off there, on the quay,
Methought 'twas the Master's form.

And as I entered the harbor, at last,
I saw Him quietly stand;
And tho' I heeded Him not in the past,
He gently helped me to land.

And so He called me again that day,
As we stood by the raging sea;
Now He holds my hand, and I walk His way,
Since He called through the storm to me!

WHOLE MEAL BREAD AS WAR MEASURE

Senate Committee Recommends Some Very Drastic Changes.

Ottawa, Aug. 2.—The manufacturing of whole meal bread in Canada during the war has been recommended by a committee of the senate which has been investigating the subject.

The committee heard a number of important witnesses. Its recommendations were as follows:

"1. That in the manufacture of flour a larger portion of the whole berry be included than heretofore."
"2. That the public be urged to substitute for wheat flour, whenever possible, flour obtained from rye, barley, maize, oats, rice, beans, etc."
"3. That the feeding to cattle the higher grades of wheat suited for the manufacture of flour be prohibited."
"4. That a copy of the evidence given before the committee be transmitted to the food controller with strong recommendation that rules and regulations to ensure the success carrying out of the above recommendations be immediately promulgated."

Fought Coercion---Promoted Union

"Sir, all my life I have fought coercion; all my life I have promoted union." Sir Wilfrid Laurier on third reading of Coercion Bill, July 20, 1917, Hansard report.

Hansard Report.
Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the House has just listened, especially the speech of the member for Assiniboia (Mr. Turfitt), with whom I have been associated for so many years, I leave no doubt that I may rise to a fruitless effort, for placing once more before the House the danger which in my judgment must follow if the Bill now before us is enacted and put into effect.

Referendum and United Action.
On the second reading of this Bill, as the House recollects, I moved that the principle of the Bill be referred to the people. The Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. George Foster) who spoke immediately afterward on behalf of the Government, characterized this amendment as a miserable dilatory motion. That it was a dilatory motion I do not dispute; I asked that the House should pause before imposing such a measure upon the people. Whether or not it was a miserable expedient, time alone can tell—nay, time has already told. It required but a few weeks to get the answer. That answer is already written, not upon the walls of this hall, in flaming and mysterious letters, to be explained only by a seer, but in very plain language in the record of the House, in the division upon the second reading, and even in the spectacle which is offered every day in the division of opinion that exists among both parties in this question. The reason which I urged against this Bill was that, presented as it was after the numerous statements which had been made by the Prime Minister and the Government, that compulsion would not be resorted to; that to the very last we would win the war on the voluntary principle, if this Bill were forced upon the people by the Government, division, irritation, friction, and disunion would follow.

Conscription and Disunion.

Already we have the verification of my statement, even before the Bill has left this House. The statement which I made was combated by many hon. members on both sides of the House, and by none more vigorously than by the Solicitor General (Mr. McKeighan), who spoke after the Minister of Trade and Commerce. The Solicitor General took the ground that no such disunion would follow from the intentions of the Government, which were to be found within the four corners of the Bill, and which were to get more soldiers to fill the ranks of our army. The Minister of Trade and Commerce, I do not purpose entering into any discussion here and now. If there be those who have affirmed—and there are some—that the intention of the Government was more to win the elections rather than to win the war, on such a statement I do not offer any reflection at all, and I do not purpose entering into any discussion of the statement in regard to it. If there be those who contend that this measure was forced upon the Government by the jinkes and the ultra-imperialists, who were in this country, but in all British countries, have tried to force upon those countries the continental military system of Europe, I have no objection to entering into a discussion in regard to that. To those who, like the Solicitor General, affirm that the intentions of the Government are to be found within the four corners of the Bill, I have only this observation to offer: That I accept the statement as it was made, but the attitude and the conduct of the Government showed a singular lack of candor and force of thought. I charge against the Government, in introducing this measure as they did, without any more preparation than they made, and upon the first day of the war that there would be no compulsion, and that they would continue the voluntary system; that the Bill, as it has been presented, precipitated upon the people certainly showed that no calculation had been made as to what would be its effect, and although its intentions were sinister, and in this House and in this country, more violent speeches have been made than were ever before heard.

The Government Self-Deceived.

The Solicitor General spoke very confidently as to the results of this Bill—more confidently, perhaps, than he felt. He stated that he had no doubt that the Bill, as it was studied by the people, would produce bad effects. Perhaps I had better read his language. He said: "I am as confident as I have ever been of anything in my life, that if the members of this House, reading and studying this Bill, and hearing this debate, will go to their consciences and tell them the meaning, purpose and intentions of this Bill, there will be no possibility whatever of discord or resistance." This was very easily said. Whence comes this assurance of my hon. friend? Would he stand today with the same assurance? I have no doubt that he did what he said should be done, namely, that he studied the Bill; that he explained it to his constituents; that he showed them there was nothing in it to which they could take exception. How do I know that he did that? He would have been recreant to his office, to his constituents, to his self-respect, if he had not attempted to explain this Bill to his followers and to show that there was nothing in it to which exception could be taken. But he failed, as anybody must fail who had to give the same explanation. I followed the speech of the Solicitor General with more than usual attention, to find out what was in him, a fine case and new argument. Still, I free from anxiety and doubt. There was a passage in particular which struck me very much. He said he knew what effect it had on the other members of the House who listened to it. He said:

"We are told in this assembly that it would produce disunion. It would not produce it. It is framed to avoid disunion. Let no man deceive himself. We do not avoid disunion by dropping before the people a measure any more than we avoid disunion by going ahead with this measure. I see no more peril in this course than in the other."

This is a singular confession of impotence. Mark the words. There is peril behind and in front whether this measure is proceeded with or not. That confirms what I said a moment ago, namely, that the Government was singularly deficient in foresight and forthrightness when it introduced such a measure without calculating the effects as they were calculated by the Solicitor General.

Party Friends Divided.

But the Bill is before us at the present time, and we have to deal with it. The apple of discord has been thrown into this assembly and already the assembly is divided on it. It is nothing new in Parliamentary history for a Government when it introduces a new measure, to find itself deserted by its followers or its friends. That has happened in all countries; that has happened in all countries where there are parliaments. It is, however, something which is very unusual when a measure is introduced which creates division, not only in the one party but in the two parties at the same time. Why should I be blind to what has happened here? I have already heard of my friends take exception to the course which I have taken as the leader of the party. I find myself on the present occasion estranged from friends who were just as near and dear to me as any of my own brothers. I need not tell the House—every one will believe me—that such an estrangement, even if it be only temporary and upon this question alone, is a wrench at one's very heart strings; but every one of my hon. friends knows that I have not tried to impose my views upon any of my followers, but to respect their consciences; I would not attempt to bring any one of them around to my way of thinking. I have my conscience and they have theirs, but this situation shows that we are face to face with a cleavage which, unless it is checked, may rend and tear this Canada of ours down to the very roots.

Defiance of Majority Rule.

Such is the situation and no one can be blind to it. If there are in this House men who affect to be impervious to the situation, to be careless about it, I am not one of them. If I may give a personal illustration, this is a matter which has caused me a great deal of anxiety within the past two weeks. But what is the use of lamenting over the situation? What is the attitude of the Government with regard to the situation? How are they purposing to settle the question? The Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. George Foster), when he rose after me to answer my speech on that occasion. The answer is simply these words of my right hon. friend:

"What we propose is to do, in the light of the experience and knowledge that we have, our plain duty, and the good sense which we possess, as we choose later, or by history."

At least, we will stand as not having been afraid.

That is the only position which is to be taken by the Government. They will carry this measure by coercion, let the consequences be what they may. This attitude of coercion and this disregard of the consequences, which may follow, coming from friends of mine on the other side, grounded in Toryism, do not surprise me, but I am more surprised when the answer is given by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, who is a member for South Wellington (Mr. Guthrie), who, speaking upon this very subject as the Solicitor General, referred to another question, which I will discuss very briefly; that is that this Parliament is in the nature of a rump parliament, as he described it, a rump parliament, his contention being that, on that ground, this House should not deal with it.

So I do not take that view of the matter. My view is that this Parliament is in every respect legally constituted.

There is no doubt at all that this Parliament is legally constituted, and as long as it is not dissolved, either by the effluxion of time or by the decree of the Governor General, it can equally this law and make equally dangerous to the Canadian people. But that is not the point I wish to bring before the House.

British Rule by Majority.

It is not a question of legality or illegality, but a question of policy. Is it wise, is it prudent, is it good statesmanship to force on the Canadian people at the present time, a measure as it is called before the House? Upon this point I have simply to say to my hon. friend, who was brought up in the same school as I was, and again and again in England and in Canada, that Parliament has been dissolved for the purpose of consulting the people, and that it has the power to pass. The last instance I recall is the reciprocity question, on which we went to the country, and years ago. We consulted the people, and we preferred to submit it to the people, and for my part I am prouder to be standing here before the House, than I am to be standing in the House, and to be denied to the people the right to have their way upon this question. All through my long parliamentary career my object has been to consult the people. I would not coerce.

Canada Must Keep Up Production to Win the War.

The attitude of the Government upon this question is simply that we must have more soldiers at the front. A letter has been read from General Currie, commanding our forces in France, asking for more men. I do not know of the general who, now or at any time in history, did not ask for more soldiers. I say to my hon. friend from Assiniboia, that I stand on the same platform today that I have stood on from the very first day of this war; my conviction is that we must have more soldiers at the front. I wish that our population and our resources would allow of our sending not only half a million, but a million men, to the front. I say to my hon. friend from the life of the nation at the present time without impeding the public services which are essential to this country, and the war. This is a subject which, in my humble opinion, has not been sufficiently considered by the Government. They were into this question, they paid no heed to the consideration, that it is not only men the Allies require at the present time, but food, and the means of transport, and the means of communication. The men could not be better employed in producing food in Canada than in fighting at the front.

A Long and Terrible Struggle.

It is manifest that the campaign of 1917 will not materialize as we had hoped. We had expected that the offensive of this year would be effective. We had supposed that an offensive would take place on all fronts, especially on the Western front, where we expected the Allies would pierce the German line, and drive it back to the Rhine. I have no doubt these plans were laid, and if they could have been carried out the effect would have been as I have stated. Unfortunately, events in Russia materially interfered with the plans, and enabled Germany to transfer thousands of men from the Russian front to the Western front, with the result that the Allied offensive was checked. But there is some comfort to be found in the situation. There is one good omen, it seems to me. The strategy of the German staff in this war has been to strike a weak spot in the Allied line. They would throw an overwhelming force upon that point, with the object of breaking down resistance, and pushing into the Allied territory as far as possible, and then they would entrench. Such has been their strategy since the beginning of the war. At the very opening of the war, they struck Belgium, in the face of the treaty which she had herself signed, because she knew that by attacking France through Belgium, she would strike at the weakest point. The same thing happened in Roumania. Instead of protecting their own frontier, the Germans invaded Roumania, and have remained in possession of it ever since. As I said, there is some comfort to be found in the war situation. When the revolution took place, everybody expected that the Germans would begin their much-talked-of offensive to Petrograd. The fact that it has not taken place is another proof that the Germans do not have the men. Their resources in men are beginning to fail. It is an evidence that the policy of attrition, which was pursued by the Allies in 1916, after the battle of the Marne is commencing to tell. And if the due almost altogether to the fact that the Germans have not the men. At all seasons, I have brought to bear upon the German Empire by its blockade in the North Sea.

Food Destroyed by Submarines.

The Germans have countered by submarine warfare, and have brought about a very serious position, perhaps the most serious of the war, but there is some comfort in it. made no promise but, whether he made any promise or not to the high dignitary when seeking to obtain his assistance, that he had in the mind of this high dignitary was that there would be no conscription. I grant that my hon. friend may have made a promise, but that was the impression which on the mind of the gentleman whose assistance it was important for him to secure. But, my hon. friend said, in addition, that even if he had made a promise, and even if at that time conscription were not intended under the changed conditions of things it now had to be resorted to, I ask my hon. friend in what way has the condition changed? The condition was the same last fall as it is today. Last fall we had men at the front just as we have today. My hon. friend knows that when we send men to war it is a fact that there must be a depletion in the ranks. My hon. friend knew that as well last fall as he knows it today, but he never George Brown about such a depletion in the ranks. But, is it not a fact that when last year we, in this House, granted an extension of Parliament for one year, we had in our ears the solemn promise of the Prime Minister, that under no circumstances would there be any deviation from the voluntary system? But we are told, and the whole basis of this Bill, that voluntary enlistment has failed.

Sir Robert Borden: I must take exception to my right hon. friend's statement. I do not think that I put it in the way he suggests.

General satisfaction is expressed over the decision of President Hickey of the American Association to use six umpires instead of four. Chilli and Brennan will continue to work alone, while the others will operate in pairs. Perhaps it won't be long before Hickey returns to the double-umpire standard entirely, which he abandoned six weeks ago.

One of the greatest bouts in the career of William Perry, known to fighting history as "The Tipton Slasher," was fought on Aug. 4, 1846. Tass Parker, the West Bromwich champion, was his opponent.
Parker was a stable hand, and while he gave his master great satisfaction as such, his conduct in the ring did not bring him great honor. These men had met in the ring twice before. Once in 1843 when they fought sixty-seven rounds in one hour and thirty-five minutes, when the police stopped the match. In February, 1844, they met again at Horley and fought for 100 points, and in the bout went to one hundred and thirty-three rounds, fought in two hours and thirty-two minutes, when Parker dropped without a blow, the Slasher receiving the stakes. The third fight was considered the best. It took place upon Lindrick Common, Aug. 4, 1846. Tass fought with more spirit and determination than he had ever shown before and the Slasher, too, was at his best. Friends of Tass attributed his defeat to the fact that two of his ribs had been broken in the terrific fall which the Slasher gave him in the seventh round.
Tass was decisively licked in twenty-three rounds, fought in seven minutes and the Tipton Slasher added greatly to his reputation by this speedy victory.

Today Pugilistic Annals.
1897—Jack Everhardt defeated Spike Kelly in twenty rounds at San Francisco. While Everhardt never achieved the title, he was one of the greatest lightweights of the day and could probably have made mince meat of such fighters as Welsh, Ritchie and Leonard. He was a native of New Orleans and fought his first important battle in that city with Andy Bowen, who defeated him in 25 rounds. This was shortly after Bowen's famous fight with Burke in New Orleans, which went to 110 rounds and was the longest bout in modern prize ring history. In 1894 Everhardt knocked out Santon Abbott in the fifth round at Orleans, and in 1895 he went to Coney Island and fought Kid Lavigne for the lightweight title, losing the decision after twenty rounds. He then fought draws with Owen Ziegler and Young Griffo and in 1896 he again lost to Lavigne in 24 rounds at New York. He closed his ring career in England in 1900.
1899—Joe Chynski beat Pete Everett in seven rounds on a foul, at Denver.
1911—Battling Nelson knocked out Tommy Gaffney in five rounds at Medford, Ore.

Sporting Facts and Fancies

Can you beat it? Just as if being a baseball player wasn't honor enough for one man, Davy Robertson of the Giants has to be number 258 in the draft, the first number drawn in the lottery.
Some men certainly are lucky!

They'll have to get a new fence out on the ball lot in Rockford, Ill., one that won't catch a fielder's glove when he happens to run into it. The performance of Outfielder McCabe is still being spoken of among fans as probably the freak of all plays in baseball history. The Three-I League certainly can't show anything to equal it. McCabe got the little finger of his left hand caught in the fence to which he had run to get a high one hit out by Lorraine of Hannibal.
The finger stuck in the fence and Lorraine made a home run. It was some circus!

Fred Mitchell's players have come to realize that bench warming for them is no sinecure. Fred doesn't allow them to sit around and wear out their pants. They've got to get busy and pitch to the batters for exercise during practice. That's right, Fred, make 'em work for their living.

The Pirates expect to get a lot of good out of Vic Saker. Up to the time they took him over he was doing fine work at the first sack for the Cubs. Hans Wagner will be shifted to third base, and then watch what happens.

Dogs in England have had their day. For the duration of the war at any rate, they will not appear with ribbons around their necks and covered with scented hair oil, for the kibosh has been put on all dog shows. The reason is that dogs, particularly show dogs, consume too much food required by men. It will hurt many dog owners' feelings, at the same time, to have his proud animal classed with tramp and mongrel dogs, but this has been done by a cruel government.

In the World of Labor

It caused somewhat of a surprise at the city hall when the application of the street railway for an increase of wages was received this week. Such an application was totally unexpected, for one reason on account of the state that the city's finances are in at the present time, and again it was thought that the street railway men were well satisfied after the agreement put through last fall.
For these reasons the application has not been received with any good feeling by the city authorities, and the majority of the aldermen are dead against any increases, while they say that the stipulations with regard to the one-man cars are a dead end against the operation of these cars.

and that this is a distinct breach of the understanding arrived at last year, as the men then agreed not to throw any obstacles in the way of these cars being given a trial. It is no coincidence to say that the aldermen state and pretty forcibly too, that the street railway may just as well rest idle as any more expense be incurred.
It is not unlikely that if an agreement is put through this year, that there will be a request for the date to be changed, as the date of termination being in the fall brings the whole business too much within the range of municipal politics.

Calgary is having a fight over the one-man cars, and there it is contended that the employees are doing their best to knock the cars over, while the city authorities declare is proving highly satisfactory, and a saving to the city.

TAKING the 1,842 local trade union branches in Canada, 828 of them are located in eighteen cities, and 539 reported a membership of 22,221, representing over 40 per cent. of the entire trade union membership in the Dominion. Montreal occupies first place as to number of local branches while Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver follow in the order named. In Edmonton there are 43 unions, with an estimated membership of 2,659.

ON the initiative of the local Trades and Labor Council, the Brantford City Council, appointed a special committee to investigate the cause of the high cost of living, and to make recommendations calculated to operate in relief. The committee sat almost every week for some months.
The practice was to invite representative traders in different lines to meet the committee, and submit themselves for examination. The examination of traders included those engaged in the following lines of business: Coal, bread, milk, cold storage and flour. While outside its authority under the federal order-in-council, the committee, feeling it relevant to the increase in the cost of living, investigated also the situation as to vacant ground, the cultivation of vacant lots, and the possibility of securing for the citizens a cheap and adequate supply of lake fish. As the result of its investigations the committee reported that it was of opinion the main causes of the increase in the cost of living were beyond the control of the municipality, and could only be dealt with effectively by Dominion and provincial legislation.

THE minister of labor has received the report of the board of conciliation and investigation established for the adjustments of difference between the Grand Trunk Railway company and its car men. The board was composed as follows: Judge Gunn, chairman; P. H. McGuigan, Toronto, for the company, and Charlesagne Rodier, Montreal, for the employees. The board's findings are unanimous. An increase of 20 per cent. is recommended, representing an increased expenditure for the year estimated at about $440,000, the number of employees directly concerned is estimated at approximately 2,900. It is recommended that the schedule rates etc., should be effective as from July 1, 1917, "and thereafter until terminated by the usual notice in writing from either party."
While the findings do not include any formal agreement between the parties, little doubt is entertained that they will be acceptable to both parties.

neither heat was considered excep-

SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1917.

We are entering on the fourth year of the war; with victory not yet in sight, in fact with no more prospect of an immediate victory than there was a year ago.

But this consideration is always to be kept in mind. Germany was the aggressor; and when the aggressor has failed to accomplish his end, the party assailed has the better of the battle. If victory is not in immediate prospect for us it assuredly is not in prospect for Germany. We have at least established that if the Allied peoples hang together and exert their strength Germany cannot beat them. If we lose, therefore, the fault will be our own.

We have suffered some severe reverses during the third year of the fighting. Roumania entered the war last August, and before the close of the year its army had been broken, its territory overrun, its resources captured by the enemy, its people subject to the vengeance of the Huns. Its fate was not simply a military reverse. It disclosed a tragic miscalculation on the part of the Allied Governments. That they urged Roumania to enter the war is unquestioned. Yet they failed to foresee the consequences and make provision for them. It would have been better for the Allied cause if Roumania had not been induced to come in.

Far more disastrous was the collapse of the Russian military power. That it has collapsed, completely, cannot be denied. Whether it can be re-established at any early date is problematical. The courage of the Russian soldiers has been proven on too many hard-fought fields to be challenged. But no army can keep its courage when it is reduced by disorganization to the condition of a mob. And however courageous, a disorganized army cannot fight a winning battle. Faced by a resolute enemy under competent command and the greater courage of its men, the greater their losses without hope of accomplishing anything militarily important. The hope of Russia's recovery lies in the vast extent of the country, which offers its broken forces the opportunity for indefinite retirement, and therefore for re-organization beyond the reach of the enemy. In that and in Kerensky.

Yet the balance of the loss and gain for the year is in favor of the Allies. The French have shown that their line cannot be broken. And in concert with the British they have shown that the enemy can be pressed back where he is strongest. The impregnability of the Hindenburg line is a myth. It has not been broken, but it has been penetrated at numberless points. It is a line of retreat. The retreat is slow but it is sure and permanent. Of far more importance than these gains in the field is the appearance of the United States among the Allies. This accession of strength is prospective rather than present. But it is none the less real. And it is almost incalculable. If the great Republic was slow in making its decision, it is preparing to back up that decision to the limit of a strength which can scarcely be computed. Men, money, munitions, ships, it is preparing to supply unreservedly. Serious as the Russian collapse has been, the entrance of this powerful ally more than compensates for the losses of the year. So much more that it makes eventual victory certain if the other Allies hold fast.

As yet there is no sign of the end. There is no way of forecasting when or how the end will come. It may come suddenly, or it may be remote. We are not fighting to attain a material objective, whose attainment would automatically end the war. We are fighting to dispel an idea—the idea in the minds of the German people that they can conquer the world. Until that idea is driven from their minds there can be no peace that would be other than a truce. When it has been extinguished the purpose the Allies have in the war will be achieved. The security of the world depends, as Mr. Balfour said the other day, on showing the German people that their Imperialistic policy leads to disaster. Hitherto it has led always to success. They had come to believe that it would always lead them to success. Under it they waged successful wars against Denmark, Austria and France forty years ago and unified their peoples. Under it they have never been beaten. Hence they cling to it as the means of achieving world power. When in bitter experience they come to understand and know that the end of it is death, misery and destruction for them, their country, and all that they hold dear in life, they will renounce the mad ambitions of their masters and be content to live as a family in the world of nations. How long it will take to teach them that, and what sacrifices the world will have to make to teach them, there is no telling. But the world can have no peace until they have been taught.

Another argument for saving food is that it pays.

The abrogation of responsible government in Canada does not seem an effective way of stirring up Canadians to an enthusiastic resolution to free the people of Germany from the grip of irresponsible government.

Not least to the credit of Canadian women for the war work they are doing is the fact that they do not have to be dubbed honorary colonels for telling other people what to do, nor created barons for filling their pockets with money sweated out of their sorely-afflicted countrymen.

Sir Robert Borden is credited with "taking his life in his hand" in a patriotic resolution to force conscription upon a people who could not be trusted to fight for life and liberty without compulsion arbitrarily imposed. Sir Robert Borden in adopting conscription "took his life in his hand" in the same way that a ship-wrecked sailor "takes his life in his hand" when he climbs onto a floating hen-coop to save himself from being drowned.

The Ontario Win-the-War League is holding a convention. The city is that Ontario cannot raise regiments of soldiers as easily as it raises regiments of delegates to applaud while the Kaiser and his Huns are blown into space by blasts of perfervid oratory. If the aims for "world power" could be brought to ruin by discharges of long range denunciation Germany would have sued for peace long ago to end the agony of drum fire from the platform of Massey Hall. And if Ontario could raise regiments of soldiers as readily as it raises conventions of talkers there would be no need to conscript men in Western Canada to make up the shortage of men from the "banner province" of the Dominion.

Colonel Bruce has got out another report in reply to the Bapiste report, which was got out to "knock" Dr. Bruce's first report on the management of Canadian military hospitals in England. Col. Bruce's second report has been sent to Sir George Perley, our Minister of Militia in England, who in turn is preparing a report in reply to it. By the time Sir George gets through the accumulated reports will be so voluminous that no one will have time to read them, nor be able to arrive at a clear conclusion if he had time, which is the object aimed at. Befuddling the public has been one of the most conspicuous habits of the Borden Government. A Government that can govern properly does not have to use circumlocution to prevent the public getting at the facts.

Food Controller Hanna has been telling the millers that they must cut down the price of flour until it corresponds to the highest price the Government allows the farmer to get for his wheat. He is on the right track in this matter, and it is to be hoped he has also

AS TO PARTY ALLEGIANCE

Canada is—or ought to be—a free country. Every man has, or had, the right to think as he pleased and to vote as his conscience should direct. Political parties are simply the natural association of men having a kindred outlook on questions of common interest in affairs of Government. Those who share like views ordinarily act together as a political party to achieve a common purpose. There is nothing more binding than this in political partisanship. And yet such is the mind of man that party ties hold strongly in a vast majority of cases and under most circumstances. It is right and necessary that this should be the case, because there must be continuity of purpose or there can be no definite direction of public affairs.

From time to time changing conditions produce changes in the line-up of the public mind, which changes result in control by one political party giving way to control by another on the verdict of the electors. "Many men, many minds." At no time is there or can there be unanimity in the membership of any political party on all public questions. Unity of action can only occur by those who hold divergent views sinking their differences on the less pressing or less important matters, so as to achieve the common purpose regarding the more pressing or more important.

From time to time subject to the nature of the occasion, individual or representative members of a party may be so impressed with the importance of a certain view as to be impelled to declare themselves in opposition to the majority of their party on that point. This need not mean that their difference with their party, even in an important particular, renders them less loyal or efficient supporters of the principles for which the party as a whole stands. If it did, partyism would be tyrannical—which it is not; although in party politics as in every other activity of life there is always present the tendency to establish dominance by or on behalf of some person, or for some cause.

The allegiance of a man to his party is not discredited by his voting against it on a question of principle; but by following up his vote with action whose purpose or natural result would be to secure or maintain the dominance of the party, and thereby the success of the principles, which he has usually opposed. The man has just as good a right to follow up his single vote against his own party by action in support of former opponents as he had to vote with them in the first place; but when he does so he ceases to be fairly classed with his former party associates, and is entitled to be counted amongst their opponents.

Certain members of the Liberal party have voted in Parliament against their leader and the majority of his party on the conscription bill. The Toronto Star which was formerly classed as a Liberal paper but which is now working in close co-operation with Big Business, which largely centres in Toronto, explains to the Ontario Liberals who voted for conscription that having voted for the Borden Government once they must continue to do so or the vote they gave was of no value—in maintaining it in office. The Star says:

"What do the Liberal members of Parliament from Ontario mean when they say they are in favor of carrying on the war, that they are in favor of conscription so that they may see the raising of the necessary forces expeditiously and in the only way they can be raised? There can be no meaning to their words at all if they also say they have unshaken faith in the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and mean to support him as in the past."

It is obvious that whatever may have been the intent of the Liberals the courage to bring about the readjustment he speaks of. That there will be opposition to it is quite likely, and the interests affected are both rich and influential. There is certainly little in the past three years to suggest that either patriotism or mercy will incline the milling trust to willingly concede live-and-let-live prices to the public, save on assurance that once the election is over and their friends once more in power the restrictions will be relaxed and they allowed to again profiteer the public for all they are worth. If Mr. Hanna is sincere in his purpose the best that could happen to him and for the success of his policy would be the overthrow of the Government that has allowed the combine to beat the public so long, and the establishment of a Government pledged "to the hilt" to the regulation of food prices. A Government that has allowed the profiteers to plunder the public as they have been allowed to do during the past three years is not to be trusted to resist the demand of the same interests to be allowed to resume the plundering once the elections have been got past.

erals who voted for conscription, the intent of those who were leading the conscription campaign was to use the patriotism of the people as a wedge with which to split the Liberal party and thereby save the Borden Government from the consequences of their mal-administration. Sir John Macdonald did that successfully in 1878 with his so-called National Policy. The Borden-Bourassa—Big Business Alliance were equally successful in 1911. The Star-Flavelle-C. N. R. group—the executive of the Big Business organization of Toronto and Montreal, hope for success by the same means in 1917. The people of Canada lost out in 1878 and in 1911. They won in 1896. The question in 1917 is: Shall Big Business win as in 1878 and 1911, or shall the people win as in 1896, under the same leader and supporting the same principles?

The campaign to secure a Liberal split is on,—and on hard. At first men are abjured to put principle above party. Having done so, and thereby split more or less from their own party, they are abjured to put party above principle and stick with their new associates. The test of patriotism is simple in the last degree. If you vote Conservative you are a patriot, and if you vote Liberal you are a traitor. Liberals are only permitted to pay the taxes and do the fighting. They must have nothing to say about running the country.

The Mayor's Speech and City Taxes.

To the Bulletin:

Sir: I have read the mayor's speech as reported in The Bulletin made at the Rotary Club gathering. I also note what Mayor Henry had to say regarding the militia and their taxes. I much regret to have to take exception to the mayor's line of argument and would have preferred to have read that he had boldly and courageously attacked that very large section of the wealthy community who evade every form of contribution to the city upkeep and general maintenance. The number of such people and the large amount of money so extracted every year, would cause much rubbing of the eyes before believing it seen. There are scores of persons in affluent standing and loan investment companies sapping the very life blood of the purely artisan section of the community, enjoying free education for their children, using our public walks, parks, highways and fire and police protection, flouting their higher wisdom before the burdened taxpayers in the city's real estate, many of whom boast it abroad that their investments are free from every form of taxation, while nearly 95 per cent. of the city income is derived from burdens imposed by extravagant taxes on homes of the people and other investments in real estate.

The mayor knows full well, so too do the aldermanic board, that the most lucrative professions and businesses in the city are free and totally exempt from taxation, professions and businesses that make it the more necessary to maintain the police force and the fire department in their present state of high expenditure, higher by far than any other department of the civic undertaking.

If as the mayor insinuates there are members of the militia who have become members of that honorable battalion of his majesty's forces to escape the ruinous effects of an inapplicable tax sale, at an hour when the nation is wading through the bitterest throes of its history, if there be those who have sought such proffered protection from the attempt to confiscate home and all by an unscrupulous power, that authorized that tax sale, or that body of rapacious loan sharks who would, because of arrears of mortgage interest, often the cause of the world-wide unrest and by no inclinations to default, for every such escape, from such attack, a new monument of shame is erected to such as are responsible for the persecution.

Mr. Editor, we have a worthy mayor; none values his personal and business attitude more than your correspondent. I would like to see through your columns what would he do if he had the power to offer for sale every lot owned and possessed by members of the Reserve Militia? Surely he had volume enough to work upon at the last sale without the additional few owned by members of the militia force.

I had the opportunity of speaking with twenty members of this worthy body of men a few days ago, eighteen of whom are the registered owners of their own home and lot or lots, fifteen of whom have receipts for taxes paid up to end of 1916. I believe every man of the fifteen will permit his name to be published if need be. Now, sir, I would like to see published through some medium, a list of those in the public service drawing their cheques regularly from the city exchequer being registered owners or by agreement of sale of property within the city confines who have paid their taxes up to and including 1916, and a list of such who have not. If it be counted a sin to hold real estate in the city of Edmonton and to be in arrears of taxes, all the sinners are not enrolled in the 101st or the Reserve. Will you, Mr. Editor, permit me through your paper, a little further latitude? Re the city's financial trouble, our worthy mayor says he wants and must have so much money. He may have the full amount, the purely artisan owners will find it for him, if the commissioners will undertake to live up to obligations and redeem their unfulfilled pledges and make passable some way to reach the hundreds of homes of the legitimate toiler, give his wife and children and himself some means of getting to and from their dwellings, free from the mud and mire caused by years of arrears of attention. If they, the commissioners, don't do something in this regard, the city will find increased by the thousand owners willing to increase the volume of properties the city may, if they want more of such wealth, call their own. Yours truly,

JUSTICE.

DEFENDS RESERVE MILITIA

Sir: I read with much indignation the letter from Coronation to the mayor of this city in which the writer set forth that many ratepayers have joined the reserve militia to avoid their tax obligations. I cannot see any reason why the reserve militia should be singled out of all the local units for all the slurs of this nature. There are probably as many debtors seeking protection in the Dragons and the Fusiliers as there are in the Reserve Militia and to my knowledge some have joined the overseas forces for that purpose. The Reserve Militia Battalion consists largely of hard drilling officers and men who joined for the purpose of fitting themselves for home protection and many members have already transferred to the expeditionary forces. The members of the Reserve Militia naturally resent the continual linking of the name of their unit with tax and sheriff dodgers.

INDIGNANT NON-COM.

The Crisis at Ottawa and the Duty of the West

(From the Regina Leader.)

The situation which has developed at Ottawa has aroused keener interest among all classes of our population than probably any previous political development in Canadian history. This is but natural, as the present crisis is not merely political in character; it is a military, financial, economic crisis, as well as a political one. The fate of party leaders, or of the parties themselves, is of minor importance compared with the wise and proper solution of the real questions and issues which must be decided in the general election now fast approaching. This election is necessary to ascertain the will of the people, create a new Parliament fresh from the people and with a mandate from them, and to put an end to the impossible situation which has existed at Ottawa for many months past, crippling our efforts in the war and creating discontent at home.

There are momentous questions to be decided by the people in the coming elections. The winning of the war, and how Canada can best exert her full power to that end, is first in importance. As to winning the war people differ in details, not as to the general principle. But the details of war policy—Conscription or no Conscription—is by no means the only issue that will be decided. The new Parliament to be elected within the course of a few weeks will be elected for a term of five years. The war may last that long, no man can tell, but the probabilities are strongly that it will not, that it will be ended within another year or two. Consequently, the new Parliament shortly to be chosen by the people will be entrusted with the solution of the "After-the-War" problems, as well as with the immediate "Win-the-War" problem, and the whole future welfare of this Dominion is inseparably bound up with the wise and statesmanlike manner in which the former problems are handled, just as truly as our future is involved in the winning of the war.

Under these circumstances it is most gratifying that the public are alive to the importance and seriousness of the existing crisis in Canadian affairs, and that the attention of the people is centred on national affairs as never before in the history of the country. With such an aroused public interest it will be much more difficult to mislead the electors, and delude them with specious election cries, than has sometimes been the case. The people are looking below the surface of things in these trying and anxious times. The realities of life have been brought close home to them, and mere loyalty clap-trap, flag-fapping, and other devices of the professional politician, no longer sway people who, during three years of patriotic self-sacrifice, have learned the real meaning of loyalty and patriotism, and have too deep-seated a love for the flag to allow it to be used as a party badge to blind them to their own interests and their country's welfare.

The Parties and the War.

In the election shortly to be held the Borden Government will appeal to the people for support and a return to power on one publicly stated issue—the winning of the war, and, as the principal detail of policy necessary to accomplish that object, the enforcement of Conscription.

The Liberals of Canada will likewise appeal to the people for support and a return to power on one main issue—the winning of the war, but they will submit to the electors not one but several policies which they deem absolutely essential in order that Canada may exert the full power of all her resources, military, financial, economic, to the accomplishment of the one all-important object.

While the Borden Government will insist that the only issue is Conscription, and that those who oppose that policy are willing even anxious, that Canada should quit the war, many electors, keenly anxious to win the war, will oppose Conscription, believing that there are other matters and policies equally essential to the winning of the war which the Borden Government has neglected, and that, in order to secure the adoption and enforcement of these other essential war policies, it is necessary that there should be a change of Government.

Looking Below the Surface.

Is the Borden Government sincere in its advocacy of Conscription as a military necessity? Frankly, this paper does not think so. All the events preceding Premier Borden's announcement of Conscription, and the circumstances under which that announcement was made, and followed, not preceded, as it was, by the invitation to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to join the Government, force the conclusion that Conscription was adopted by the Borden Government, not as a military measure, but as a political manoeuvre.

Let us look below the surface of things. Long before Conscription was announced the Borden Government and the Conservative party managers realized that they had lost all hope of electing more than a bare half-dozen of supporters from the Province of Quebec at the next election whenever it might take place. They had discovered that their bungling in connection with the people of that Province in relation to the war had alienated all sympathy and support. Quebec was irrevocably lost to the Conservative party. This is a fact which was and is universally recognized, and which no attempt is made to deny.

A second fact which was most disturbing to the Borden Government, the Conservative party managers, and their Big Interests allies, is that in the next Parliament the four Provinces of Western Canada will have fifty-five representatives. Of this number the Bordenites had few hopes of electing more than a handful. It cannot be said that the Borden-Big Interests Government had lost the West, as they did Quebec, because they never had the West. Such measure of success as the Conservatives had in 1911 was due to the Roblin-Rogers Government in Manitoba and the McBride Government in British Columbia. These Governments are no more. On the contrary, Liberalism is triumphant and in the ascendant from the Great Lakes to the Pacific, and within the past couple of years has achieved, not merely notable, but positively staggering victories in all our Western Provinces. Thus the Borden-Big Interests Government had nothing to hope for from the West.

Defeat, sure and overwhelming, was staring it in the face. The West was practically unanimous for Reciprocity, lower tariffs, wider markets, and a greater British Preference. Quebec, particularly rural Quebec, was also strongly in favor of lower tariffs. That Province had, prior to the growing power of the West, been the backbone of the low tariff party in Canada. Thus the Big Interests of Ontario found themselves between the upper and nether millstones of the West and Quebec, and saw that in the next election they and their high protective tariff privileges would be ground to atoms.

Tory-Big Interests Scheme Concealed.

What was to be done? The astute heads of the Big Interests organizations, and the crafty and politically unscrupulous Minister of Elections in the Borden cabinet, saw there was only one thing to do—they must by hook or by crook split the Liberal party and create a condition of affairs which would render it difficult, if not absolutely impossible, for the 55 low tariff Members from the West to join forces with the 65 low tariff Members from Quebec, especially as recent elections in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia had shown that Liberalism was almost as strong down by the Eastern sea as it was on the prairies of the West.

Casting about for some issue upon which to divide the West from Quebec, the Big Interests and Tory party managers saw that, alone among the Provinces of Canada, the four Western Provinces had voluntarily given more than their allotted number of men for the overseas military forces, while, on the other hand, Quebec had lamentably failed to supply its quota. Here was something to work on—the enthusiasm of the West in the prosecution of the war on the one hand, and the backwardness and lukewarmness of Quebec on the other.

And so Conscription had its birth in Canada—an issue which it was known by the Big Interests-Tory combination would be bitterly opposed in Quebec, and which they figured would be enthusiastically received by the West. Having lost Quebec, they schemed to win the West. The winning of the West was to the Big Interests more important than the winning of the war. As a matter of fact, with their own Big Interests Government in power at Ottawa, the longer the war lasted, the wealthier and more strongly entrenched in power would the Big Interests become.

Putting Laurier in a Hole.

So Conscription was sprung on the country without prelude or warning of any kind whatever. Having committed the Government to Conscription, the next move was to ask Sir Wilfrid Laurier to enter a Coalition Government pledged in advance to Conscription. Sir Wilfrid was to have no voice in determining national policy; all the Big Interests and Tory managers wanted of him was to place him in as difficult and embarrassing a position politically as they could possibly devise. Sir Wilfrid declined to take a step which he was convinced was detrimental to the unity, and present and future interests of this Dominion.

Then followed, as was anticipated, a difference of opinion in the Liberal Parliamentary following on the issue of Conscription. Conservative papers throughout Canada, and particularly in Big Interests Ontario, joyfully heralded the smash-up of the once great Liberal party. They fondly believed that the deep-laid Big Interests-Tory scheme had worked successfully. The vote was taken on Conscription, and it carried by a large majority, all the Liberals outside of Quebec, with but four or five exceptions, voting with the Government.

Then, before the Conscription measure was finally passed through the House, the second trick in the game was played by Premier Borden and a resolution introduced for the further extension of the life of Parliament. To the amazement and chagrin of the Big Interests-Tory combination those Liberals who had supported Conscription refused to approve of continuing a moribund Parliament in existence, and declined to become parties to a scheme to deny to the people a right of passing judgment upon the many acute issues now before the country.

Immediately those Liberals who had been lauded to the skies as sincere patriots, loyalists first and last, with partyism occupying a very secondary place with them, were immediately denounced as traitors to the Great Cause. Where formerly it was impossible to employ too many laudatory adjectives in praise of these Liberals, it became an equally difficult task to find sufficient condemnatory adjectives with which to denounce them.

To Cripple the West.

And so an election had to be held. There was no way out for the Big Interests-Borden party. If they could win the West, or materially weaken the Liberal support here, all might yet be well for their pocketbooks and bank accounts. It is admitted by the Conservative press that for once the Western Provinces hold the key to the Privy Council chamber at Ottawa, that the West now controls the political situation in Canada, that it can make and un-make Governments. And so the Big Interests organization, and chief organizer, moves on to the West.

In 1911 Clifford Sifton was the brains of the anti-Reciprocity campaign in Ontario. He organized the campaign and directed distribution of the sinews of war. Although he had always been regarded as one of the Western leaders, he turned his back on the West, played false to the admitted needs and interests of this country, and fought day and night to defeat the wishes of our people. He saw that Ontario was then the pivotal Province, and he ignored the West. He launched Arthur Hawkes on his "British-Born" campaign, waved the flag, joined forces with Bourassa in Quebec, the while he started an insidious race and religious cry against Laurier along the concession lines of rural Ontario. He turned the trick, and the West has been paying the bills ever since.

And just as Clifford Sifton, on behalf of the Big Interests, issued a Macedonian cry to defeat Laurier and Reciprocity in 1911, so, in 1917, he raises his voice against Laurier and calls for the retention of the Borden-Big Interests Government in office.

But it is not Ontario alone to which he makes appeal this time. He realizes that the West is the pivotal centre this year. And he has come West to endeavor to seduce our people from their allegiance to Liberalism and its fiscal policy in the interests of the masses, and to swing them into line in support of the Borden-Big Interests party through a new flag-fapping campaign. This time it is not "No truck or trade with the Yankees," with "No looking to Washington." No, the Big Interests campaign this year is to be hidden behind a "Win-the-War" battle-cry.

The West's Danger—and Opportunity.

Western Liberalism is alive to the danger confronting this country. For six years Western Liberalism has maintained the battle for Lower Tariffs, Wider Markets, a Greater British Preference. Today victory is within the grasp of the people of this country if they remain united and true. But, if they allow themselves to be deluded and mocked by the Big Interests campaigners with their smooth "Win-the-War" election campaign cry (if deceit, they will postpone their victory for at least another five years).

The Western Provinces of Canada have the first great political opportunity which has come to them. If they refuse to be blinded by a dishonest flag-waving campaign, if they remain firm and united and return a practically solid Western delegation of low tariff Liberals to the new Parliament, they can dominate the situation. Control is now theirs for the taking. But if they divide their forces, if they permit themselves to be fooled by a clap-trap campaign cry, they will continue to be the hewers of wood and drawers of water for the Big Interests of the East.

So far as the West is concerned it does not require to be told by anybody what its duty is in the war, and towards winning the war. Actions speak louder than words, and the action of the West in voluntarily supplying more than the full quota of men expected of it is sufficient answer on that score. If more men are needed from the West, and the call is sounded, and those other reforms essential to winning the war are introduced, the West will not be backward with its man-power. It has not been in the past; it will not be in the future. The West can be trusted so far as winning the war is concerned.

Essentials in Winning the War.

Much more than Conscription is needed before Canada will be in a position to do its full share in winning the war. Conscription may or may not be essential. Unity in Canada is essential. There is no denying that fact.

Confidence on the part of the masses of the people in their Government is essential, because, lacking that confidence the people will not respond and put forth their maximum effort.

An end to war profiteering of all kinds is essential. The cost of living problem must be tackled and dealt with in some more acceptable fashion than by telling the people they must eat one-third less, while they are compelled to pay more for a two-thirds meal than they formerly did for a full meal. If men are to be conscripted and controlled, so must the food barons of this country.

The Bordenites shout for conscription of men's lives in defense of the Empire, but for three years little or nothing has been done to conscript other men's money to bear the cost of defending the Empire. Up to the present time, the masses of Canadian people have supplied both the men for the armies and, through unfair taxation, the money to finance the war.

More essential than Conscription in the winning of the war is the systematic and effective organization of all the powers and resources of this Dominion of ours. Without such organization Conscription will fail. Of all the countries at war Canada is the least organized of any. For three years the Borden-Big Interests Government has shown itself selfish and inefficient. It cannot longer be trusted.

Borden Weak and Inefficient.

The Tory and so-called independent press are daily declaring that the issue is: "Return Borden and win the war or elect Laurier and quit the war." Never was a campaign slogan invented that was more false. Laurier and the Liberal party are just as keen to win the war as Borden and his followers possibly can be. Because some of them differ on the one detail of Conscription supplies no reason for the disloyal and treasonable charges made against Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the men who will support him in the coming election.

It is said that a Government headed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier cannot be trusted to direct a vigorous prosecution of the war on Canada's part. Because he refused to support Conscription under the circumstances in which it was introduced furnishes no support for such a statement. Sir Robert Borden has refused to favor Dominion-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic, the elimination of party patronage, the stoppage of profiteering, leadership in recruiting, control of food supplies and prices, and a dozen other policies which many people regard as just as important as Conscription in the winning of the war. Why not charge him with being a traitor and disloyal?

Sir Robert Borden is not disloyal. He is merely weak and inefficient. His weakness and indecision has brought Canada into the confusion it is in today, and he has during the past few months displayed his utter incapacity and inability to get the Dominion out of the confusion into which he has brought it. His invitation to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to enter his Government is a confession on his part that Sir Wilfrid would be able to aid in winning the war.

Borden Must Go.

For three years prior to the war, and for three years at war, Sir Robert Borden has failed to display the essential qualities of leadership. Whether Sir Wilfrid Laurier is or is not the proper head for a "Win-the-War" Government may be open to argument. But there is no room for argument that Sir Robert Borden is not the man. His past six years' record establishes his incapacity, inefficiency, indecision, his inability to lead. Whoever leads Canada's Government for the remainder of the war, it cannot be Sir Robert Borden if this Dominion is to have real leadership, systematic organization, and efficient Business Administration.

Business Administration Necessary to Success.

It is only by the inauguration of an efficient Business Administration that Canada can be put in a position to do its share in winning the war. Conscription alone will never do it. And it cannot be denied that during the years Sir Wilfrid Laurier was head of the Government of Canada this country did enjoy an efficient business administration, the most efficient in its history, resulting in what was everywhere recognized as Canada's golden era of development and prosperity. And we venture the assertion that had Sir Wilfrid Laurier been Premier of Canada on August 4, 1914, this Dominion would not be in the state of political, financial, economic and military chaos it is in today.

The Duty of the West.

And what is the duty of the West in the circumstances? It is to remain true to those principles it has avowed and supported in the past; to refuse to be deluded by any so-called loyalty "Win-the-War" cry; for its people and its Provinces to stand firmly and unitedly together and send a solid delegation to Ottawa in support of Western views regardless of what other Provinces may do.

The great Winnipeg convention of Liberalism composed of men and women of all liberal views regardless of party names, should clearly and unmistakably define the attitude of the masses of the people of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, and then there should be elected by the overwhelming vote of the people of these Provinces those candidates who stand pledged to support the platform and policies of that great representative gathering.

It is the duty of the West to stand for the thorough organization of this whole country for winning the war. That our Western people are a unit for continuing the war until we have achieved all for which we entered the grim struggle cannot be questioned. Canada has not been exerting its full power, and the reason is to be found not because Conscription has not been in force, but because the country has not been organized, because abuses of all kinds have flourished unchecked, and no leadership has been given to the people.

First and foremost, therefore, the vital preliminary step is a change of administrators at Ottawa. Until the change is effected there can be no radical change in prevailing methods. And there must be such a change if progress is to be made.

With a solid Western delegation in the next Parliament supporting such a war policy there need be no fear in the minds of the people of Canada as to the future of Canada in relation to the war. It will see the war through to a triumphal end, with Canada playing an ever increasingly noble and effective part.

And after the war a Parliament containing a solid Western delegation representing the views of Liberalism can be entrusted with the very important task of dealing with the "After-the-War" problems. Certainly, a Borden Government, dominated by the Big Interests, and with such a record as that of the past six years, cannot be trusted to handle these delicate and intricate questions affecting the interests of the masses of our people and the whole future welfare of Canada for generations to come.

Beauty of the Skin

BECAUSE they clog the pores of the skin and prevent the healthful action of these minute organs of excretion, powders when used continually injure the skin and give rise to pimples and skin eruptions.

There is no beautifier of the skin to compare to Dr. Chase's Ointment as a means of curing all sorts of skin eruptions, and leaving the skin in its natural soft, smooth condition.

Apply the ointment at night after bathing in warm water and you will be surprised at the improvement which will be made by a few applications.
